

RE: [Full-Disclosure] IE is just as safe as FireFox

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Mailing-Lists/Full-Disclosure/2004-11/0504.html>

From: Michael Evanchik (mevanchik_at_relationship1.com)

Date: 11/12/04

To: <Colin.Scott@csplc.com>, <full-disclosure@lists.netsys.com>

Date: Fri, 12 Nov 2004 11:15:08 -0500

I disagree Colin,

A good administrator knows there is more than one way to skin a cat. Rafel, I believe was just briefly stating some solutions to the problem. I can tell you windows protection can be defeated with a few registry changes. Combine that with an active directory login script and I believe that is one way to solve the issue. It is wrong to complain and give up if you administrator. Talk to your developer, I'm sure he will have a solution =)

Mike

www.michaelevanchik.com

-----Original Message-----

From: full-disclosure-admin@lists.netsys.com

[mailto:full-disclosure-admin@lists.netsys.com] On Behalf Of

Colin.Scott@csplc.com

Sent: Friday, November 12, 2004 9:46 AM

To: full-disclosure@lists.netsys.com

Subject: Re: [Full-Disclosure] IE is just as safe as FireFox

More infinite wisdom there Rafel.

Price per license for "Finjan's Vital Security for Web" = 9.50GBP per user + 20% support per annum, roughly equates to 160,000GBP (plus any hardware, software and network requirements) to cover us with your no doubt class-leading product. I'm sure that the Directors will love to cough up another 160 grand when we are already paying MS for Premier support.

Use SUS to install XP SP2 to 14,000 Windows 2000 machines? Somehow I think that will be problematic.

Replace the SHDOCVW.DLL with the XP SP2 version? On Windows 2000 machines? And what about the practical problems getting round Windows File Protection? On 14,000 machines? Do you want to come in here and try what you suggest?

Full-Disclosure: RE: [Full-Disclosure] IE is just as safe as FireFox

I think Rafel you need a lesson in being a Windows Administrator before posting your very helpfull posts to this list.

So thanks but no thanks.

Colin.

"Rafel Ivgi,
n