TiVo has software package that allows a user to setup an Image and Audio server on their PC. When connected to the same LAN as the TiVo it allows the image and audio files to be viewed on a TV via the TiVo DVR.

I contacted TiVo to ask if there software was effected and they only referred me to their Press Release section of their website. I guess the answer is yes?!?

This brings up an important question, can a user tell by version number if the gdiplus.dll is effected? Apparently companies like TiVo are not concerned with security so we need a way to figure out what is effected.

Do you Yahoo!?
