

Re: FW: Keyboard Locking/Invisible Screensaver

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Mailing-Lists/securityfocus/focus-ms/2003-07/0037.html>

From: Pogue (pogue_at_rokus.net)

Date: 07/09/03

To: builder173@hotmail.com

Date: Wed, 9 Jul 2003 17:09:52 +0900

<http://www.customcomputerhaven.com/freedownloads.html>

Fourth or fifth one down.

Zip file contains "clear.scr" – which allows you check "On resume, password protect"

We use it for never-ending looping PowerPoint show (.pps) files in public areas.

HTH.

Pogue.

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Bob the Builder [<mailto:builder173@hotmail.com>]

> Sent: Wednesday, July 09, 2003 6:00 AM

> To: focus-ms@securityfocus.com

> Subject: Keyboard Locking/Invisible Screensaver

>

> Hi,

> I have a scenario where I want to put a system display clearly > visible in an

>

> open-access area. The machine, keyboard and mouse driving the > display will be physically secure but just to be belt and braces > about it if someone gains access to the keyboard and mouse I don't > want them to be able to access the system without first passing some > sort of authentication test.

>

> The ideal thing would seem to be a screensaver which just displays > the desktop including any changes which occur. Then if someone were > to interfere

>

> with the system the screen would just go to the windows 2000 system > locked screen. Of course I am sure that there are other adequate > solutions and I would be grateful for anything people have heard of.

>

> Cheers,

>

> Bob

>

>

> Tired of spam? Get advanced junk mail protection with MSN 8.

> <http://join.msn.com/?page=features/junkmail>

>

>

> -

>

> --

----- End of Original Message -----
