Once again, I see that you couldn't help yourself and brainpharted more useless, mindless ZA-jocking without excusing yurself.

The reason there are so many questions about ZoneAlarm problems and bugs is because there's one thing users can't do, and that is fix bugs that are ORIGINATED in the cr@ppy ZA code itself. Most computer people are do-it-yourselfers and ONLY seek out help on the Net as a LAST resort.

Because there just aren't many problems with KerioPF, their users are SATISFIED "customers" and have NO NEED to seek out a newsgroup for support because the software is so good, there aren't any complaints or questions about how to overcome bugs. Not so with old ZAP.

Also, seeing how KerioPF is FREE, and ZAPro is LICENSED on a yearly basis with a continual fee builtin to its usage, (What a scam!), the only "market" we're talking about are ZAP's and the other pay-per-view firewalls. KerioPF has a HUGE user-base that is completely invisible because there are NO PROBLEMS with it.
