Eddie, I also bought a SOHO from eBay and I've already been through this. You can download all your software from SOHO's sight except you need to do a few things before you can download your files:

www.watchguard.com

What you need to do is to transfer the ownership of your appliance from the previous owner to you. Then, this will allow you to enter SOHO's support pages with all the downloads for your specific appliance. So here's the steps you need to take:

1. Go to SOHO's site, and register your name and serial number of your product. This will get you access to the "Change of ownership" application.
2. Fax the application to the number listed with a photo copy of the bottom of the appliance with the serial #. You also need to fill out the seller's name and have him sign it.... I forged his signiture(big woop). Also, fax a copy of the sale reciept (mine was the ebay invoice with his and my names).
3. In a few days, you then get a support email saying the tranfer was completed. When you log back into SOHO's site, you'll have a bunch of other links for your appliance.

I have an account on SOHO's site. I can't download your files because I don't have access to the software for you appliance. You only get access to downloads only for what you register. Fax away.
