I'm US military currently in Ecuador. We use the local ISP here and starting about a week ago, we haven't been able to webcam or make PC to phone calls using Yahoo messenger. When I attempt to, I get a message saying it appears I'm behind a firewall, this message even appears when I disable the firewall on my laptop. Is there a way to get around this firewall so I can web cam with my wife and kids? Several of us have brought this issue to the attention of our computer folks but they can't seem to get a solution worked out with the locals. Thanks for any help.

Just an update, I tried Skype today and the webcam worked great. I don't know what the difference is between Yahoo and Skype but I'll just keep using Skype. Thanks for all the help.

Good to hear. That is a strange difference. Might warrant some investigation.

Whats easier for kissing random strangers? Mistletoe or chloroform?
