I've been running AVG on my home PC for a couple of weeks, and have been finding it annoying that AVG wants me to restart my PC most days. Every time AVG loads in a new virus database update, it wants you to restart the system; and if it's waiting for you to restart, then it won't successfully download the next update, so you might have to restart twice to catch up after missing a restart. I haven't managed to think up any reasonable justification for requiring the restart.
