

Re: strange puTTY plink warning when using cvs over ssh

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/comp.security.ssh/2003-11/0177.html>

---

From: apm (apm35\_at\_student.open.ac.uk)

Date: 11/20/03

Date: 20 Nov 2003 05:27:37 -0800

apm35@student.open.ac.uk (apm) wrote in message news:<d1a33011.0310310142.bf73736@posting.google.com>...

> Guys,

>

> I am using puTTY to help with cvs over ssh and in general it works but > there is a strange warning message. A checkout command gives the > following, waits for quite a while, then proceeds with the checkout > ok:-

>

> 'from cvs servering: unrecognized response `

> cvs checkout: warning: unrecognized response

> `C:\andrew\work>"c:\Program

> Files\Putty\plink" -l -l amarlow -P portnumber -i "c:\.ssh\identity"

> -l "amarlow" machinename

> 'from cvs server

This problem has got more serious. My projects build scripts were changed to check the exit status of cvs to ensure the checkout worked. The puTTY warning above causes the exit status to be set such that the script thinks the cvs checkout has failed. A puTTY fix would be MOST welcome. In the meantime we have to ignore checkout errors and blunder on.

Regards,

Andrew