

SSH tunneling/port forwarding and stateful packet inspection

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/comp.security.ssh/2004-02/0311.html>

From: steve (steph19731_at_yahoo.com)

Date: 02/24/04

Date: 24 Feb 2004 11:03:27 -0800

Most firewalls have stateful packet inspection built in. I am having difficulty understanding how if a person is running an ssh tunnel from an internal client to an external server doing port forwarding all via port 443, than how come stateful packet inspection doesn't catch this and allow it to pass through?