Re: Speed Difference SCP vs. RCP

Source: http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/comp.security.ssh/2005−01/0269.html

---

From: Matthew Poole (spam_at_stops.here)
Date: 01/25/05

```
Date: Tue, 25 Jan 2005 01:28:37 GMT
```

In article <10vb42vs0a1015a@corp.supernews.com>, "Michael" <michaeln@twentyten.org> wrote:
SNIP
>In our speed tests, we push about 472 MB/min via SCP and 960 MB/min via RCP.
>Do these numbers (or at least ratios) seem right to you for a >gigabit−over−copper network?
>
They seem about right. Remember that SCP has the encryption overhead.
It's slower than straight copying as a result.
Check the documentation, there may be a faster cypher available to you.
I can't remember what the default is, but TwoFish and Blowfish are meant to be pretty quick.

```
−−
Matthew Poole               Auckland, New Zealand
"Veni, vidi, velcro...
                     I came, I saw, I stuck around"
My real e−mail is mattATp00leDOTnet
```