Hi all,

I am interested in some ideas with building a application like this :

<http://fotoweb.fotoware.com/FotoWeb/Default.asp>

<http://www.fotoware.com/Products/FotoWeb/Default.asp>

It doesn't have to be so complicated because i don't sell photographs.

It's very cool software/page but they want to much for it so i have decided that i'll make my own but i need some ideas. First thing is :

I'll need some way to automatically create thumbnail on the fly for the users which logs on the page. Waht i want is to tell the software/page that i have these folders which i want to show. The software should then create the thumbnails for the user when he/she logs on. I know that fotoweb uses some kind of cache. I could make a admin site were i could add a new archive then the page should do the rest.

Next thing will be to make somekind of user rigts as they have in fotoweb were i can check what evry user has the righths to do. For example a user can be able to view a archive but not download the full res. file. Those kind of stuff.

Another thing whic is cool on fotoweb is the function for selecting different pictures then be able to download them as zip. i suppose that should be able with asp.net too ? Does anybody have any code examples ?

There are alot of functions whic can be implemented for example the possibility to send the selected files to a ftp server.

I just need some ideas or code examples on some of the functions that i have talked about. Comments or ideas are very welcome.

PLEASE let me know if you think i can do all this on another way. I am just desperate when i heard that the price on fotoweb was 1300 $.
