Hi,

I am having a weird problem with the change password control. Unlike the createwizard control that creates new users and passwords, the changepassword control has no way of setting the View's index. So after the password is changed the success view comes up. I click continue and go back to a gridview I have displaying all of the users. If the admin user clicks on any member in the grid I redisplay the changepassword control. The problem is that the control always has the success view up and the view that allows the user to retype in the passwords never resets. I've spent a lot of time going in circles trying to figure out how to toggle to that template/View or something. I even tried making the success control visibility = false and that just makes the entire changepassword control go invisible.

Thanks,

David
