

Re: IIS Lockdown/URLScan – no .exe's

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.inetserver.iis.security/2003-07/1169.html>

From: Bernard (qbernard_at_hotmail.com)

Date: 07/29/03

Date: Tue, 29 Jul 2003 11:14:31 +0800

You can edit the urlscan.ini at %windir%/system32/inetsrv/urlscan/to allow .exe extention...

Get more detail about urlscan, here

INFO: Using URLScan on IIS

<http://support.microsoft.com/?id=307608>

HOW TO: Configure the URLScan Tool

<http://support.microsoft.com/?id=326444>

--

Regards,

Bernard Cheah

<http://support.microsoft.com/>

Please respond to newsgroups only ...

"S. Quillen" <scott.quillen@state.de.us-exception> wrote in message news:03d601c35561$7760d810$a601280a@phx.gbl...

> Update - fixed my .asp problems by re-creating my site > (that need them) as Front Page Webs. Still having the > problem with .exe's tho, if anyone has a helpful idea.

>

> Thanks,

>

> Sq

>

> >-----Original Message-----

> >Here's my problem - I'm running IIS 5 on a W2K server > >(SP3) to serve an intranet site (inside the DMZ).

> >

> >On Friday (yes, yes, never do anything on Friday) I > >downloaded teh IIS Lockdown/URLScan tools and set them > >loose on the server. Either I didn't read the Docs very > >well, or didn't configure things correctly, as my server > >started having probelms immediately thereafter.

> >Specifically, the server would not allow any .asp, > >or .exe files. I have found the exception that was > >preventing those (in URLSCAN.ini), and a as a temporary > >fix, I have just removed the urlscan.dll from the list > >of > >ISAPI filters in the master site configuration.

> >

> >This allowed my to serve .asp pages (Some anyway), but I > >am still unable to use any page which calls an .exe > >(from

microsoft.public.inetsrv.iis.security: Re: IIS Lockdown/URLScan – no .exe's > >the cgi-bin folder). Where else is this being > >restricted? Execute permissions seem to be set > correctly

```
> >in IIS, (scripts and executables), and the permissions > on > >the cgi-bin folder on the site in question are correct.
> >
> >When I try to access an .exe, I get this page:
> >-----
> >An internal error has occurred on the server.
> >
> >Please contact an administrator.
> >-----
> >
> >Any ideas what else is stopping me here? I also have a > >few .asp sites that are not working (Error 500)... I > >have rolled back the IIS Lockdown settings (and have > >even > >removed the app), but am still unable to get my .exe's > >to > >run.
> >
> >Thanks much in advance for any suggestions, etc.
> >
> >Scottq
> >.
> >
```