

Re: Visiting a Porn Site May be Dangerous for Your Computer

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.security.virus/2007-01/msg00097.html>

- From: bpetria@xxxxxxxxxxx (Brad)
 - Date: Sat, 13 Jan 2007 15:20:58 GMT
-

Hi,

FYI

I wasn't looking for a porn site. I was looking for animal photos such as tigers, cheetahs, etc. using a search engine. In the list, was a site that aroused my curiosity, which turned out to be a porn site.

I didn't pay for anything. In fact, I never pay (typing a credit card number) for anything while I am on the web. See my tag line at bottom.

Brad

On Fri, 12 Jan 2007 13:25:06 GMT, bpetria@xxxxxxxxxxx (Brad) wrote:

Hi,

Visiting a porn site can be hazardous to your computer.

I will admit, I am guilty. I did it to see what was there (curiosity). Sorry, I don't remember the site address. Afterwards, when I boot up my computer, I received a New PCI device detected message. It turns out that my modem (dial up) was no longer usable as though the hardware driver was removed. If I re-install it, it is removed again during the next boot up.

Fortunately, I make backups of my entire system/s. I completely removed "WINDOWS" (Win98) and "Program Files", and replaced them with a backup.

Brad

Before you type your password, credit card number, etc., be sure there is no active keystroke logger (spyware) in your PC.