

Re: How do I know what's installed?

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.security/2002-05/0555.html>

---

From: Patrick Peters (patrick.peters@orametrix.com)

Date: 05/23/02

From: "Patrick Peters" <patrick.peters@orametrix.com>

Date: Wed, 22 May 2002 18:06:53 -0500

I was hoping for something that didn't involve any software that wasn't already on the machine. Something really easy and obvious, like the Help/About screen in the Explorer. When I walk up to a machine to start debugging, I don't necessarily have my favorite tools with me...

Pat

"x y" <jamescagney90210@yahoo.com> wrote in message

news:uLHjADeACHA.2344@tkmsftngp02...

> I would use HFnetchk. It doesn't need to be installed, just unzipped, and > one copy will scan your whole network.

>

> "Patrick Peters" <patrick.peters@orametrix.com> wrote in message

> news:umLTvbdACHA.2104@tkmsftngp02...

>> How can I tell if hot fixes (in particular SRP1) have been installed on a >> system? I'd like to find a way to do this without installing any > additional >> tools on the machine. Is there some program that comes as part of > standard

>> Win2K Professional that will list everything that has been applied?

>>

>> Thanks

>>

>> Pat

>>

>>

>>

>

>