Please take your caps lock off, thanks.

Unless your willing to password protect your screensaver and give it zero minutes to activate, you can't protect me with a password, it's too easy to bypass.

So with that said, do this.

Set your screen saver to activate upon boot up, zero minutes to wait, insert a password to protect the screen saver, and Voila nobody can get past the screen saver without the password, You can and when you do, reset the time to a more reasonable period of waiting, then reset it to zero when you are getting ready to leave your pc..
