

Re: Email Hackers

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.security/2004-06/1915.html>

From: dave (none_at_invalid.com)

Date: 06/28/04

Date: Mon, 28 Jun 2004 11:57:35 +1200

So you did take the job?

<I know I'm not crazy>

Thats not for you to say.

"hacked" <hacked@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message news:A1F4E168-0D4C-40B4-9D0F-D96AAE0AB1F9@microsoft.com...

> Hey,

>

> This may be a long thread. I sent an email through hotmail(not this one) to a company applying for a job. It had my picture and lots of personal information. I have the feeling that the employer hacked my email and used my picture to broadcast false sexual accusations about me over hotmail. I get negative stares from people everywhere on the street and random people start yelling at me. I've tried closing the account and it has been scheduled for deletion for like 3-4 months now but they are still there.
Maybe he is able to reopen them, I'm not sure. If so, I will be stuck with this problem my entire life. I tried contacting Microsoft tons of times and they always say, see our 'terms of use' policy' and refuse to delete them.

> I've contacted the police and they say, show us proof. However, it's all being done behind my back and I have no direct evidence. I know I'm not crazy. I've been thinking of getting a P.I. but they are expensive. In the mean time, its alienating everyone and my new boss is just looking for an excuse to fire me.

> Can people be taken to court and sued for this kind of thing? I want to sue the pants off of him. What are my options?

>

> Thanks