Do you have Windows 2K? XP? In any case, you say you need the password to your one and only account, so I'm assuming you are using Windows and that you want to change your Administrator password. (If not, you could simply log in as Administrator and change the password.)

I was once able to reset the Administrator password by using Linux and Peter Nordahl's Ntpasswd tool.

Do a Google search for your operating system; you will find out how to change whatever password you need changing.
