

Re: Administrators Permission on Network

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.security/2004-07/2001.html>

---

From: Jeff Cochran (jeff.nospam\_at\_zina.com)

Date: 07/27/04

Date: Tue, 27 Jul 2004 21:20:53 GMT

On Tue, 27 Jul 2004 06:15:41 -0700, "John"
<anonymous@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote:

>Well they are accusing me of denying access to the >network administrators, but all i did was set up >permissions to stop a select few from accessing my c >drive.

That could do it.

>I have just spoken to the network administrator for a >large bank with 180 servers and 1500 users and he says >that unless I had network administrative rights then I >could not lock them out.

That bank needs a new admin.

>I only had local admin rights and was restricted to very >little on the network, ie accessing certain folders were >prohibited...

If you remove permission for the domain administrators from your local admin group, then you deny them access. If you have local admin rights you control the box and can lock anyone, including yourself, out.

Jeff

>Does that make sense???

>

>Thanks

>>-----Original Message-----

>>What exactly are they saying you did? If you have local >admin rights and >>played with settings on your computer you could easily >lock out the domain >>admins from access. However, if they really cared about >security, etc.,

>>they'd never have given you local admin rights to begin >with.
>>
>>John wrote:
>>> Hi
>>>
>>> Could anyone tell me if it is possible to "lock out" a >>> network administrator on a domain of any type? I have >>> been claimed to have denied access to the network >>> administrators but I do not see how this is possible >as I >>> thought they had overall control on the network???
>>>
>>> HELP ME PLEASE – URGENT!!!!
>>>
>>> Thank you
>>>
>>> John
>>
>>
>>.br/>>>