

Re: File that manages login details

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.security/2005-01/1012.html>

From: Steven L Umbach (n9rou_at_n0-spam-for-me-comcast.net)

Date: 01/24/05

Date: Mon, 24 Jan 2005 12:12:22 -0600

There is no such file but if you enable auditing of account logon events for Domain Controller Security Policy and logon events for Domain Security Policy or Local Security Policy most of that information is available in the security logs in Event Viewer. You can use the free Event Comb to scan the security logs of multiple computer or buy a third party program that can centralize certain security log events. LanGuard has such a program and I believe they offer a thirty day trial. --- Steve

<http://www.gfi.com/lanselm/>

"Jojoy K Kuriakose" <Jojoy K Kuriakose@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message news:C083C302-E9B3-4036-9F72-6231177281D2@microsoft.com...

- > Is there a file that manages the login details.
- > Details of the users who has logged in, how long they logged in, time they
- > logged out,
- > if they chose shut down or hibernate ... etc
- > is there a file that the administrator can view o see which all users have
- > logged in
- >