

microsoft.public.sqlserver.security: Re: Where to place SQL Server DMZ, LAN etc.

Re: Where to place SQL Server DMZ, LAN etc.

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.sqlserver.security/2002-06/0962.html>

---

From: Ben (dsfsdaf)

Date: 06/27/02

From: "Ben" <dsfsdaf>
Date: Thu, 27 Jun 2002 15:11:29 -0500

No way is really right. Depends on your requirements.

Some people believe EVERYTHING should be in the DMZ Thus it is virtually impossible to ever enter into your LAN.

However, if you expose any critical data to the web, you risk your SQL Server being compromised and all the data being accessible.

I don't know the right answer actually. – Sorry.

"Walt White" <walt@work.com> wrote in message news:u$XP6AfHCHA.1268@tkmsftngp08...

> I'm trying to determine the best place to locate a SQL Server that will be > accessed by a public web server. Should I place it on the LAN and add a > second card to the Web Server that has an internal IP? Place on the LAN and > add a One-to-One NAT to the firewall? Suggestions would be appreciated.
>
> Thanks in advance.
>
>