

Re: what settings could

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.sqlserver.security/2003-07/0626.html>

From: Kevin (ReplyTo_at_Newsgroups.only)

Date: 07/30/03

Date: Wed, 30 Jul 2003 12:31:57 -0700

This is a sql server newsgroup, you might try one of the windows related ones.

--

The views expressed here are my own
and not of my employer.

"djc" <noone@nowhere.com> wrote in message
news:OzbsX7sVDHA.2368@TK2MSFTNGP09.phx.gbl... > prevent all nt4 machines from being able to log into a 2000 active directory
> domain?
>
> "the system cannot log you on to this domain because the system's computer > account in its primary domain is missing or the password on that account is > incorrect"
>
> even after deleting the computer account, dis-joining and then rejoining
the > domain nt4 still cannot log in.
>
> I recently set the 'no access without explicit anonymous permissions'
option
> in domain group policy. (a few days ago) Did not reboot server until today > and then no NT4 boxes could log in. I changed the setting back to 'not > defined' and rebooted server again but it did not help.
>
> what other setting could I have changed and don't remember that didn't take > effect until after a reboot that would make all NT4 boxes not able to login
> with the error stated above.???
>
> aaahhhh!
>
>
>