

Re: Database Corruption

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.sqlserver.security/2004-09/0349.html>

From: Mary Bray (no_at_spam.com)

Date: 09/30/04

Date: Thu, 30 Sep 2004 18:12:31 +1000

I'd be looking at the code that is doing the saving and possibly running a trace to see if the error can be trapped. I doubt there is a problem with the tables, but you can run DBCC CheckTable to be sure (instructions in SQL Books On Line).

You may have a transaction not being completed and thus the line is not saved...

"jack" <jackolantern25@hotmail.com> wrote in message news:uPrrU4rpEHA.2104@TK2MSFTNGP10.phx.gbl...

> Hello,

> I have a problem with database corruption. In the database there several thousand parts and a few hundred partlists, the partlists are becoming corrupt when closed after editing, not all of them, it happens maybe 1 in 100 list edits. One line disappears from the list and then the client > cannot

> call the list anymore, I have to add the line back in manually.

>

> I have looked in all the windows logbooks and there are no error messages, > the only SQL messages are that the TRN file has been made each hour.

>

> How can I find out what is causing the corruption?

>

> Thanks

> Jack

>

>