

microsoft.public.sqlserver.security: RE: Database Access (client) to Specific machines in LAN network.

RE: Database Access (client) to Specific machines in LAN network.

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.sqlserver.security/2004-12/0280.html>

From: suresh (suresh_at_discussions.microsoft.com)

Date: 12/29/04

Date: Wed, 29 Dec 2004 06:13:05 -0800

using ipsec u can achive this. It is a filter. u can allow and disallow i.ps.

"swati" wrote:

> Hi ,
>
> We have a LAN set up in our company . I want that some specific local > machine's IP addresses to have access the live database server.
> Want to restict machine's IP address from connecting to the live database
> .. How can I go for this ? I donot have that much idea about firewall and > router stuff . pls send me the link also which will help me in doing this.
>
> I do have complex password for SA and have created a different login /role > and users for specific rights .But still want to do the above thing to make > the database more secured.
>
> Pls help me in this.
>
> Regards,
> Swati
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>