

Re: Using xp_smtp_sendmail from a stored proc

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.sqlserver.security/2005-05/0127.html>

From: Rudi (rla.remove_at_finarch.com)

Date: 05/25/05

Date: Wed, 25 May 2005 09:17:53 +0200

That is what I have done, but I still get the error message in the application that the user needs execute permissions on the extended stored proc...

could anyone point me to some links that explain this behaviour?

Thanks

"Uri Dimant" <urid@iscar.co.il> wrote in message news:OLuVJEHYFHA.712@TK2MSFTNGP14.phx.gbl...
> Rudi
> Grant EXECUTE permission on the stored procedure that you wrote
>
> "Rudi" <rla.remove@finarch.com> wrote in message
> news:%23dYJG3GYFHA.2588@TK2MSFTNGP14.phx.gbl...
>> Hi,
>>
>> I'd like to use the xp_smtp_sendmail extended stored procedure from a >> procedure I wrote.
>> The normal procedure is installed as dbo on the database, but I still >> need >> to grant execute rights to the end-users (using integrated security... >> its >> legacy) for the extended stored procedure.
>>
>> Of course, I'd rather not have to do that, as it exposes to my sql server >> (mail spamming, files can be fetched from the server..).
>>
>> How can I set-up the security (or the stored proc) so that I do not need > to >> grant users the execute right on the extended stored proc.
>> (reminder: connection is made using integrated security)
>>
>> Thanks
>> Rudi
>>
>>
>

microsoft.public.sqlserver.security: Re: Using xp_smtp_sendmail from a stored proc

>