

Re: User Mappings to TempDB

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.sqlserver.security/2005-08/0019.html>

From: Anthony Spiteri (AnthonySpiteri_at_discussions.microsoft.com)

Date: 08/02/05

Date: Mon, 1 Aug 2005 20:23:02 -0700

Hmm, that would present just as much work in removing the user for every new database that we create...

I am thinking that a script at startup would be the best option...but any alternatives to that would be great.

"Dan Guzman" wrote:

> You can add the user to the model database so that all newly created > databases, including tempdb, contain the user. If you don't want the user > in a new database, you'll need to drop the user after database creation.
>
> --
> Hope this helps.
>
> Dan Guzman
> SQL Server MVP
>
> "Anthony Spiteri" <Anthony.Spiteri@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in > message news:1D912905-19F0-4695-8D42-DF8C3972AA60@microsoft.com...
> Been having a look online to get a solution to the following.
>>
>> Just want to have a sql account always mapped to the the TempDb with >> specific rights.
>>
>> At the moment, every restart/cluster move removes the user mappings I had >> set.
>>
>>
>
>
>