

Re: Permissions WTF

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.sqlserver.security/2005-11/0117.html>

---

From: David J. Cartwright (davidcartwright\_at\_hotmail.com)

Date: 11/16/05

Date: Wed, 16 Nov 2005 09:09:43 -0500

Thanks for reply, but it was my stupidity....i had been logged in as the user when i had created the user databases....then forgot it was a member of the group used to create the login.....should have realized it when it said i was member of db_owner and not srv role sysadmin...but i am getting slow at my old age.

"Jasper Smith" <jasper\_smith9@hotmail.com> wrote in message news:upEiioj6FHA.476@TK2MSFTNGP15.phx.gbl...

> You are getting in with sysadmin priviliges, possibly by membership of > another group. What does the following query return for your windows > account?

>

> exec master...xp_logininfo 'DOMAIN\username'

>

> --

> HTH

>

> Jasper Smith (SQL Server MVP)

> <http://www.sqldbatips.com>

> I support PASS – the definitive, global > community for SQL Server professionals –

> <http://www.sqlpass.org>

>

> "David J. Cartwright" <davidcartwright@hotmail.com> wrote in message > news:uNI5pih6FHA.3684@TK2MSFTNGP12.phx.gbl...

>>I have a intigrated log using a local group

>> the login does not have explicit access to any db's and no server roles

>> when i log on with query analyzer i can access any data (even though not >> a server admin or anything else)

>> when i remove login....can log (as it should be) >> why does this login have full access to all db's ?

>>

>>

>

>