

revoke all access for public

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.sqlserver.security/2006-07/msg00052.html>

- From: "A McGuire" <allen.mcguire@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Wed, 12 Jul 2006 14:05:22 -0500
-

If I am required to revoke all privileges from the public role (Government standards), what affect would that have on the fixed database roles? I'm finding out that db_securityadmin, for example, now doesn't have privileges to execute sp_addrole unless I explicitly grant execute permissions to the user in the db_securityadmin role. But, that defeats the purpose of putting them into the role somewhat – aside from the fact that I want to group certain security administrators.