I dont believe that SQL server keeps track of that type of information unless you have C2 auditing enabled. You could also pick that up in a trace file had you been tracing.

I could be wrong though. Does anyone else have any information?

I have a communication error from my client when I try to connect to my SQL server 2000 SP4 on a Windows 2003 server. Is there any method that I can get to see if I don't miss something when I have made the installation on the server part ?
Every help will be welcome

Regards,
