I am not a SQL kind of person, but sure hope someone here is:

I have a database where a user is defined as the dbo on a database. I do not want this user defined as such. I assume this was generated during creation of the database.

Is there a way to remove this user from being dbo on a database, or changing the dbo schema to another user? I tried using SQL Server Manger and just unchecking the box, but of course this fails.
