

Re: Public Computer Security

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.win2000.security/2002-06/2092.html>

From: JC Morales (jcmorales@labgeminis.com)

Date: 06/13/02

From: "JC Morales" <jcmorales@labgeminis.com>

Date: Thu, 13 Jun 2002 14:58:34 -0400

Maybe this link helps you (Q143164):

http://support.microsoft.com/directory/article.asp?ID=KB;EN-US;Q143164&LN=EN-US&rnk=33&SD=tech&FR=0&qry=&src=DHCS_MSPSS_tech_SRCH&SPR=WIN2000

goodbye

"Michael Eisenhart" <a-miche@microsoft.com> wrote in message news:#3uo6NECHA.2456@tkmsftngp02...

> Hi Nick:

>

> That's a question that has many answers depending on the situation(s).

> The best resource I could refer you to is www.microsoft.com/security.

> Before you start coming up with a plan I would first figure out what it is > that you want to protect and prevent. That will make it much easier to know > what to look for.

>

> --

> Michael Eisenhart

> Microsoft Support Professional

> Get Secure!! www.microsoft.com/security

> "Nick Ohanian" <nohanian@consrv.ca.gov> wrote in message

> news:ONUe1mDCHA.2444@tkmsftngp05...

>> We have a number of "public computers" in our department: one in each >> office, some in another office, and probably others. Anyways I was hoping >> that somebody out there might be able to assist me. I'd like to > configure

>> these computers so that they don't compromise our network security. The >> public may need to get to some very specific internal resources (such as > the >> specific application). They may need to get to the internet or they may > need >> to be restricted from getting to the internet (or they may need to get to microsoft.public.win2000.security: Re: Public Computer Security > > only internal web resources). It's a nt 4 domain with windows 2000 > > computers. thanks a lot!

> >
> > -Nick Ohanian
> >
> >
>
>