

Re: avoid set password prompt/Elem. School

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.win2000.security/2002-09/6828.html>

From: Nima Kamkar (nkamkar@hakauk.com)

Date: 09/06/02

From: "Nima Kamkar" <nkamkar@hakauk.com>

Date: Fri, 6 Sep 2002 21:03:27 +0100

Hello

This is not correct. The password only changes once in a domained environment. The authentication has nothing to do with the workstation. Obviously the user accounts have been setup to ask the user to change password the first time they logon. This will only happen once and not anytime they logon to any machine, because all is taken care of on the server.

I hope this helps.

Nima

"E. Brown" <lizwrites@yahoo.com> wrote in message news:cff201c255a7$80572790$35ef2ecf@TKMSFTNGXA11...

> Hi,

> We've been told that our new Win2000 workstations will > prompt each child for a Windows password the first time > they use their network/domain logon on each computer.

>

> Other than going around and logging 30 children onto EACH

> computer in every classroom and setting a blank password

> for them, is there any way to stop this behavior?

> I cannot find any mention of this on KB or how-to's.

>

> Thanks in advance for any help anyone can provide.

>