

LAN auditing???

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.win2000.security/2002-09/8310.html>

---

From: John (John@nospam.msn.com)

Date: 09/30/02

From: "John" <John@nospam.msn.com>
Date: Mon, 30 Sep 2002 09:56:42 -0700

Thanks for the response.

Well, cheaper is always better when budget is concerned. I know that they aren't going to want to hire outside help.

I know most of the lockdown stuff when it comes to patches and common sense...I am looking for programs like back office, and netbus, and basically any backdoors that could be installed. I mean, this network was really insecure.

Anything other suggestions?

Thanks again!

John

>-----Original Message-----
>You don't mention your budget, which is a big factor...
>
>You could hire consultants, like Meta Security Group, and >they will find every hole you have.
>
>You can look into products from companies like ISS. (I >would try searching on Google for something like "security >network scan NT").
>
>You can read books like Hacking Exposed, and spend all day
>everyday visiting hacker and security websites to learn >all you can.
>
>
>
>>-----Original Message-----
>>Hello everyone! I was wondering if anyone had any ideas,

>>or knew about a product that would allow a good thorough >>security audit of my LAN.

>>

>>I just took over the position on network admin at my >>company, and the person that I am replacing wasn't that >>security smart. I basically want to go over every bit of

>>the network and look for backdoors and stuff like that.

>>

>>We have Norton Anti-Virus, and that seems to get most of >>the main virus's. Is there anything else that I should >do

>>as far as auditing?

>>

>>TIA'

>>John

>>.

>>

>.

>