

Re: AutoLogoff via Time Restrictions...

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.win2000.security/2002-11/10900.html>

---

From: Vidanon (vidanon@hotmail.com)

Date: 11/05/02

From: Vidanon <vidanon@hotmail.com>

Date: Mon, 04 Nov 2002 23:18:39 GMT

Were the policies I mentioned earlier the right ones to push down ??

On Mon, 4 Nov 2002 04:43:13 -0800, Bjørn Lunde
<bjornlunde@hotmail.com> wrote:

>I think, perhaps, you could also in fact do this by >enabling the forced logoff as a GPO on the servers in >question, and not on the workstations.
>
>This is, of course, the simplest (and best) solution, >and my apologies to you for serving you with my original >suggestion.
>
>In my defence I can only say that the former would (I >think) also work.
>
>Tell me how it works out.
>
>Yours
>
>Bjørn Lunde
>>-----Original Message-----
>>You can do it by using a combination of local and domain >>user accounts.
>>
>>If you have a windows 2000 domain, you may grant users >>access to resources through domain user accounts. On >>these you can enforce log on restrictions (log on hours).
>>You then enable the policy to force logoff when logon
>>hours expire for the domain.
>>
>>If you want users to still be able to work using their >>workstations, they need to do so by using local user >>accounts. These will not be affected by the domain >>policy.
>>The workstations are in this scenario not members of the >>domain. I think I remember testing this for windows 2000 >>Server and a Windows XP Professional workstation once, >and >>I think I also remember that it worked :)

>>
>>Good luck to you
>>
>>Regards,
>>Bjørn Lunde
>>
>>
>>
>>>-----Original Message-----
>>>
>>>>From what I can tell Winexit works mostly for Idle time >>>machines...
>>>We are looking to force people off based on domain time >>>restrictions.
>>>The only policy I saw on the workstation was under
>>>
>>>\\security\templates\setup security\local >>policies\security\options
>>>
>>>Automatically log off users when logon time expires
>>>Automatically log off users when logon time expires
>>(local)
>>>
>>>The local version is enabled... The other is 'not >>defined'
>>>I'm under the assumption the the other one is >>for 'domain' logins but >>>I did not want to fool around with it unless I was >>sure...
>>>
>>>
>>>>On Sat, 2 Nov 2002 13:45:19 -0600, "Shenan T. Stanley" >>>><shenans@hotmail.com> wrote:
>>>>
>>>>>Winexit screensaver from Resource Kit?
>>>>>The policies on the servers should also allow this – if >>>they are logging
>>>>>into the domain and not just mapping the resources.
>>>>
>>>>.br/>>>>>
>>>.br/>>>>