A Windows 2000 Pro workstation has not been used for about 2 weeks. The user came back from vacation and could not log on. We have the Netware client 4.83 SP1 client installed so the initial logon is the novell client. You can put the user's login name and password (login name and passwords are the same for Windows and Netware) and login to Netware and Windows. A window pops up with the message "Trust relationship between this workstation and the primary domain failed." I can logon locally and see the domain no problem and access files on the domain but it will not let me (administrator) or anyone else logon. I have never seen this problem before. Can anyone help?
