

Re: Spooler subsystem app accessing DNS

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.win2000.security/2003-05/1621.html>

From: Boogie Woogie Flu (spam_at_email.sux)

Date: 05/31/03

Date: Sat, 31 May 2003 09:33:39 GMT

> Windows 2000 does install TCP/IP printing by default.

> <http://support.microsoft.com/default.aspx?scid=kb;en-us;246868>

>

> Perhaps that explains why the printing subsystem needs dns?

>

Would this apply even if I have NetBios over TCP/IP disabled and file and printer sharing not bound to TCP/IP?

If I'm using NetBeui exclusively for file and printer sharing, why would the print spooler need access to DNS to resolve a NetBios name to an IP address?