Hello,

I have been having an issue with folder permissions on a couple of program folders. We are running Windows 2000 on our server, and the clients have XP Pro.

I set a user account called users with full control to a specific folder. At the time of setup, the user was able to access the program no problem. One day later, the user can no longer access the program, and upon further investigation, the permissions I set were back to the way they were before I made the change. This happened with all of our users. Any help is greatly appreciated.
