Why? Because for some odd reason the [MSFT] didn't show (in fact there was no name attached) so I'd clicked when I'd noticed it was a link to an Microsoft site. I think that my OE files are going corrupt on me and it's nearing time to reset them? I'm getting quite a few of them today without a name attached, something I'd never seen before. Kind of odd really. I'm glad that I'd read before ranting. <g>

It does make me wonder what the limit would be for OE stored NG messages. There must be hundreds of thousands on this computer. Today I'm getting loads of them without names, even after cleaning and compressing. I think it's time for a reset. Ah well...
