

microsoft.public.windows.server.security: Re: Running a software / program as a service.

Re: Running a software / program as a service.

Source: <http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.windows.server.security/2005-04/0504.html>

From: Joe Richards [MVP] (humorexpress_at_hotmail.com)

Date: 04/29/05

Date: Fri, 29 Apr 2005 15:13:04 -0400

The proper way is to write the application to run as a service natively.

After that there are several applications that will "attempt" to make a non-service application run as a service such as srvany or firedaemon. You can also try the task scheduler.

--

Joe Richards Microsoft MVP Windows Server Directory Services
www.joeware.net

Backup wrote:

> Running a software / program as a service.

>

>

>

> Hello all and I hope you all have a good weekend and once again

> I wish you and all your families the best.

>

>

>

> Now for my question:

>

>

>

> I am looking to have a program run as a service in my Windows XP or 2003

> Box.

>

> Normally I have it start up in the startup folder, but this requires me to > login into the computers profile to do so. So what I am looking for is to > some how have it start when I boot my pc (as a service).

>

>

>

> Is there a way to do this? Well I know there is. I just don't know how. If > you can help please do. Thank you all for your time.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>