

Re: Password Visibility

Source:

<http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.windows.server.security/2005-12/msg00139.html>

- From: "Steven L Umbach" <n9rou@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sat, 17 Dec 2005 14:16:18 -0600
-

Your best bet is to enable auditing of account management on domain controllers and then looking in the security logs of the domain controllers for the account management event that would be generated when the user's password was reset. Event Comb can greatly simplify the search process and be sure to increase the size of the security logs substantially. --- Steve

<http://support.microsoft.com/default.aspx?scid=kb:en-us;308471> --- Event Comb

<http://www.microsoft.com/technet/security/topics/auditingandmonitoring/securitymonitoring/default.msp>
--- The Security Monitoring and Attack Detection Planning Guide

"DavidW" <DavidW@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message <news:7352D9C7-5F94-440B-B148-9293AE81CF0A@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>

- > This may seem a very odd or simple question but is it possible for network
- > administrators to see user network passwords? If the answer is yes, is
- > there
- > a way of auditing which administrator reset a user's password and when?
- >
- >
- > Thanks

-
- Prev by Date: Re: Folder movement tracking
 - Next by Date: Re: Simple File Sharing question
 - Previous by thread: Re: Password Visibility
 - Next by thread: W2003 PKI: Publish certificates onto user objects in active directory
 - Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread