

Re: AT command and Scheduled tasks UI for non-admin users

---

Source:

<http://www.derkeiler.com/Newsgroups/microsoft.public.windows.server.security/2006-01/msg00204.html>

---

- From: "Ondrej Sevecek" <ondra at my_surname dot com>
  - Date: Mon, 23 Jan 2006 12:03:53 +0100
-

do you specify a user account under which should the task run when you use the AT command? Without the account specified, you are scheduling the command to run under Local System, so it is not allowed to non-admin users.

O.

"deltacarlos" <deltacarlos@xxxxxxxx> wrote in message
<news:%23Z5mzrcHGHA.1100@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>

> Greetings,

>

> On win2003 member server, I'm getting "Access is denied" error if try AT > command in CMD prompt. If try to open "Scheduled Tasks" UI nothing happens > and no errors – UI is not showing up.

>

> Above symptoms are for all non-admin users, for admin users it's working > fine.

>

> Nonadmin users are in "Backup operators" group, they are able to login and > shutdown the server...

>

>

>

>

>

.

---

• References:

- ◆ AT command and Scheduled tasks UI for non-admin users

◇ From: deltacarlos

- Prev by Date: Re: DoS
- Next by Date: Branch Office Authentication?
- Previous by thread: AT command and Scheduled tasks UI for non-admin users

Re: AT command and Scheduled tasks UI for non-admin users

- Next by thread: Delegation problem
- Index(es):
  - ◆ Date
  - ◆ Thread