You do need to uninstall Client Services for NetWare, which I assume you don't need. Assuming you aren't using any NetWare services, you can remove the NetWare client by right-clicking My Network Places from either your Start Menu or a Windows Explorer window and select Properties. From there, right-click your Local Area Connection and select Properties from there, highlight Novell Client for Windows (may be called something else depending on the version) and click the Uninstall button. Follow the prompts and reboot the computer. Then follow the steps outlined in Jim's post above.

Good Luck,
Chris
