For some reason whenever I try to download (redirected to another location) XP won't let me make the connection, it says "the connection is either no longer available", and I know this is not the case. Even when I go to Microsoft updates like Messenger it tells me that. I have turned off my firewalls, virus program, changed my explorer settings to the lowest settings, and still the connections are not made. My XP firewall is set to off. There must be some setting in XP keeping me from downloading files. I am ready to change to an apple os, someone please help me. Thx
