Greetings! Got back from vacation today and there waiting for me was XP SP2 via AU. So just relaxing, I download and install. Mistake. Oh, everything went great for the download (96MB) and the install. However, on the reboot, yikes! XPSP2 Windows does not like my wireless connection or hardware (strangely enough, Microsoft equipment!! Base station and wireless network card for my laptop), hence no network, no email, no Internet. No fix either as the message indicated my wireless network was not compatible with "this version of Windows" ie XPSP2! I was freaking a little, mainly cuz there was NO RESTORE POINT! Apparently XPSP2 deletes all the restore points??? I don't know but there was not a single restore available. Then, as I looked through the Add/Remove Programs list, I didn't see XPSP2...but then found it...whew! Deleted it, Thank you Father! And PTL, my system was back, somehow, back to normal, just as before! Weird. I don't think I can install XPSP2?! Why wouldn't my Microsoft Broadband Wireless Router/Base Station and laptop card not be compatible with XPSP2? Any ideas, comments???
