I'm not sure if I'm at the right place to ask or get help, but here goes. My Dad, has a new Dell computer, several months old. He has a name and password set up for himself(in the event another family member would use his computer). Today when he tried to use his computer, he could get connected (dial-up) but everytime he put his name and password in he got a message box stating it was an invalid username and password. He and I know little about computers and don't know what to do to fix the problem. Any one have any ideas? If more info is needed I'll try to get it.
