I recently upgraded to XP SP2. Prior to the upgrade I was able to do application sharing with my brother's computer (he's in another city, state) to help him resolve systems questions. Now we can still exchange instant messages, and initiate application sharing process, but not actually get connected. He will see the invite and accept. I'll see the sharing window, but the status remains at "connecting...".

We've tried with him initiating the invite, but we have the same problem. We've each gone into the Security Center and allowed an exception for Messenger on our computers, but the problem remains.

Any suggestions?

Thanks,
