Check the permissions for the folder to see if administrators has full control or not. Also if the user is a member of a group that has deny permissions to the folder/file then the user may not be able to access or run the program even if the user is administrator. See the link below on how to check and manage folder NTFS permissions while logged on as an administrator. Offhand I am not familiar with XP MCE but see if any of it helps. XP Home for instance requires that you boot into Safe Mode as an administrator in order to see the security tab on a folder's properties while XP Pro requires that you disable simple file sharing.. --- Steve
