thank you for your time. much appreciated.

Live one care could sound like a good idea except, I got too much data for DVD and possibly for live one care for the first backup. I already have backup copy of "static" data plus some manual backup of critical work. I was planning to get a large IDE drive in June so I can use some Symantec software to take snapshots

2.

Right from the start I knew I would not have any easy solution for this explorer error without a price. Good thing I decided on keeping data from the system drive. The only thing I have to do after restore is to re-install what ever software that I have installed from that point.

BTW has anyone experienced more system problem with this combination of hardware:

AMD ATHLON X64 3700+ at 2200mhz on ASUS A8N-VM CSM, 2 GB of RAM, Seagate Barracuda SATA of 3x80GB drives in RAID 5 plus one SATA 2 which is not part the RAID. the last drive was used for archiving and temporary backup of older version of work in progress

I never had much of system problem until starting using this PC despite using update to date antivirus, firewall and antispysware on top of keeping the Windows XP system updated.

Hi there Gs,

Yeah, it sounds like that's your best option at this point.

You may want to consider using Windows Live OneCare as well. It provides a nice way of performing an incremental backup of all your user files every two weeks. I back my stuff of on dvd-rw's. Once you get the first one done, performing the incrementals takes no time at all, and restoration after a reload is a snap.

Re: explorer error

Sorry I couldn't help you further on this.

can't rollback unless there is another way of getting rollback instead of the system folder under accessories .

my start menu is disabled after the error popup. The only way I can bring up anything is through task manager or through new tasks I start from task mgr.

mmm, looks like it is time for me to restore the windows as of last ghost image of system drive as of early april.

Any other idea or safe guard I should take before restore form Ghost image?

Hi there GS,

If the problem persists, you might want to check in the system and application logs (Right click on My Computer, left click on Manage) and check
to see if there are any related errors in there.
It's usually a big help
when you post those in these forums.

Hope the fix that David gave you works!

Best Regards,

~Will
