I tried to combine the best ciphers available and to put them into one application.

For some reason, I can not sell even a single copy of the program.

Maybe someone could give me a suggestion why nobody is interested.

- no source-code provided
- no support for standard formats (OpenPGP)
- better programs already exist, for free
- website is full of useless awards and lacks relevant information

The application is distributed from www.bitcrypt.co.nz

Yeah, a split-domain setup is the dumbest idea since putting the "Internet" to "Explorer" and marketing it as a webbrowser. (For both cross-domain scripting is considered a feature.)
