It's curious, you're product of billions of years of natural selection who's genetic line survived at the expense of billions of other individuals and you use six hundred of the two billion precious seconds of your life to write something so juvenile.

Why waste your time on such nonsense?

I suggest you ask Douglas Gwyn if he has broken the Beale Ciphers as a direct result of my findings. His answer may well tell you, in effect, what he thinks of you. One point you can be sure of. Thomas Jefferson did not bankrupt himself over a phantom treasure. Joe knows.
